Abstract

© 2016 Taylor & Francis Group, London. The article provides an overview of the problems of the state support development for the chemical and petrochemical complex of Russia as economic growth points. In this article, the author has determined the strategic tasks and subtasks of the state that is invited to support the industry and analyze opportunities to increase the support for the industry-oriented investment projects by the state development institutions (for example, Bank for Development and Foreign Economic Affairs (Vnesheconombank)). Based on the study, the authors suggest introducing selective changes into the mechanisms of reviewing and funding of the institute of investment projects development.
